Annual Seminar for Advanced Technical Skills in Biblical Studies

Karen, Kenya | 8–19 September 2025

Two-week residential workshop on the text & language of the Greek New Testament

In recent years, we have seen God increase the number of believers worldwide, but the global Church is under-resourced with teachers equipped with the technical skills to engage the Biblical texts in-depth. Tyndale House is launching a programme to support local scholars with annual two-week intensive seminars in Africa to address this need.

In September 2025, Tyndale House will hold a pilot Annual Seminar for Advanced Technical Skills in Biblical Studies in Karen, Kenya, to serve the worldwide church in developing local experts in the Scripture's texts and encouraging Biblical scholarship.

Programme Overview

The focus of this first annual seminar will be on the text and language of the Greek New Testament with special emphasis on manuscripts and the relevance of the details of the text. Fourteen scholars will participate in a two-week residential workshop with the primary tutor being Dr Dirk Jongkind, Academic Vice Principal of Tyndale House.

Eligibility to Apply

Candidates should have:

- an adequate working ability in Hebrew and Greek,
- an intimate knowledge of Scripture,
- at least a BA and be working on Master's and PhD levels or above,
- a strong recommendation from their local church on their character and leadership.
